BAN AIMED AT SUNDAY SKATING

COUNCIL ASKED TO BAN SUNDAY DANCES, SKATING

Ordinance Proposed by Church Fellowship Laid over By Council for Investigation

WINTERS MAKES OBJECTION

Council Members Divided in Opinions on Driving People out Or Keeping Them Home

Shall Richmond have skating on Sunday at the Winter's hall rink, and dancing at East Shore Park Sunday afternoons and evenings, or shall the young pleasure seekers of this city be compelled to go elsewhere for their amusements on Sundays and Sunday evenings?

This was the question propounded to the Richmond city council last night, and which the council as a whole took one week for investigation before giving its answer.

At the request of the Richmond Church Fellowship, an ordinance regulating dancing and skating on Sunday, and making it unlawful to hold a dance or ball or conduct a skating rink within the city limits on Sunday, and fixing the penalty of violation at $500 fine or six months in jail or both, a misdemeanor offense, the ordinance to become effective on its final passage, was read, but was laid over for one week.

Adolph Winters, owner and proprietor of the Richmond Winters hall, appeared in protest against the ordinance. He said it would drive all the young people out of Richmond on Sunday and allow other towns to collect the money that ought to be spent here, where he has money invested to the amount of $100,000. He said it looked to him like special discrimination against his hall as no objections were ever made to Sunday

MCCOY'S LAST WIFE MARRIES

(By Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, June 8.—'Twas the Kid's last wife.

And she was married Friday in Riverside, Cal. Dagmar Dahlgren, eighth and most recent spouse of Norman Selby (Kid McCoy) became the bride of Alex Kipper, her partner in a vaudeville act at the Riverside courthouse. It was her third martrimonial venture. McCoy was her first husband and divorcing him, two years later, she married Victor Rodman, a motion picture actor. This marriage also proved unhappy and again she was divorced.

When McCoy was taken to San Quentin penitentiary Lagmar was the last person to tell him good-by.

"You're the only man I ever loved," she declared. But McCoy could not go that far.

"She's a good kid," he said, "but Teresa was the only woman I ever really loved." Teresa was Mrs. Teresa Mors, for whose death McCoy was tried and convicted of manslaughter.

Miss Dahlgren was married as Carmen May Browder, her maiden name.

SCOPES BUSY IN NEW YORK

(By Universal Service)

NE YORY, June 8.—John Thomas Scopes, under indictment for teaching evolution in Tennessee, was overwhelmed by his busy day here and was compelled to retire to his hotel room this afternoon.

His interview with newspapermen scheduled for 4 o'clock was called off. He was completely worn out, it was explained.

Scopes held numerous conferences yesterday and today with attorneys and officers of the American Civil Liberties Union, which is financing his defense.

Officials of the Civil Libartias Union declined tonight to announce what plans had been made for the battle which will be staged in the country courthouse in Dayton, Tenn., next Month.

It was admitted, however, that after Nellis, Samuel Rosensoll Felix Frankfurter of Harvard and Arthur G. Hayes has been selected as a board of strategy.

Scopes is being licenized by New York. It will be impossible for him to accept half the invitations he has received to dine or go sightseeing.

Until he was compelled to give up to fatigue he was whirled in a taxi from ane conference to another and to various club functions between times.

He is scheduled to attend more conferences tomorrow.

Merchants Hold Largest Dinner In The History Of Association

The get-together dinner held last evening at Memorial hall by the Merchant's Association, at which employees and employers eat down at the banquet board together and spent a most profitable evening, was the most successful event ever held by the association, and the most largely attended, over 200 being present.

The early part of the evening was spent in enjoying the dinner that had been prepared by the Ladies of St. Edmund's church, community singing, listening to reports, and an address on "Service."

Later all repaired to the main assembly room, where dancing took up the remainder of the evening.

There was exhibition fancy dancing also by the members of the class of Matilda Meyers.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME

After all were seated at the banquet tables, and the feast had been enjoyed, the meeting opened by an address of welcome by Fred LeMoine the president of the association, after which there was community sipging of "America," led by Lud Johnson, in which all entered with a great deal of spirit.

Several Scotch selections were rendered by Archie Winchcole, and soprano solos by Ruth Franco Lyon of Oakland. Both of the singers were encored several times.

Frank Ketelhut of the Richmond Baking Company, kept the crowd in an uproar by a short sketch of his experiences in life, and the manner in which he handled the "soak box."

A most instructive feature of the evening was the reading of the reports of a "professional shopper" who had been put out by the Chamber of Commerce. Guy W. Wolf, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, handled the reports. As compared with the "professional shopper" reports that were read six months ago, they showed a vast improvement in all the stores of the city. Wolf stated he was more

CITY RECEIVES DREDGING BIDS

Awarding of contracts for the dredging for Municipal Wharf No. 2, on the Richmond inner channel, was referred by the city council last night to the city attorney and the city engineer for one week, upon the receipt of two bids. Why the matter was delayed another week was not announced.

The two bids received were from the American Dredging Company, whose bid was .26.95 cents per cubic yard, and the San Francisco Bridge Company, which put in a bid of 26 cents per cubic yard. On the basis of 95,000 cubic yards to be dredged the bid of the lowest bidder would amound to $24,700.

In this case the San Francisco Bridge company, is the low bidder, but its bid still exceeds by $2,700 the $22,000 available by the city for dredging. It will probably be this phase of the question that will be investigated by the city attorney and engineer.

School Board Names Teachers To Vacancies in Richmond Schools

The Richmond high school board met in the office of Superintendent of Schools, W. T. Helms, to wind up the business of the school year just closed. In the two high schools of the city a number of teachers have resigned and others have asked for a leave of absence for a year. New teachers to take the place of those who will not be in Richmond next fall were chosen.

In the Union high school, Miss Mary Culberson and Janie Gardner were granted leaves of absence, as they are going east for a year's study. Those who resigned from this school are Sophie Helmer, Emma Hertershot, Alica George, and Florence Gordon.

Those chosen to fill those positions were the Misses Neva De Wit, Ruth Gervin, Nora Landa, Gladys Nunn, Dorothy Osborn, Catherine Ulrich and Ruth Stewart.

Those taking leave of absence from Roosevelt Junior high school are Jean Boran and Irene Wilbur, and the resigning instructors are the Misses Alstaugh, Beyes, Zipp, Bunn, Casselberg, Frank, Hamilton, Lutz, Wilson, Schiffer and Mr. Zollars.

Chosen to fill these positions were: Misses Eileen Bawlding, Burstecher, Maxine Elliott, Mattie Groessema, Del Haven, Barbara Himes, Irma Kruse, Ane Olsen, Sarah Williamson, and Charles P. MacLafferty and Charles L. Waugh.

Besides the teaching question only the usual routine business was cleared away. The meeting was presided over by William Mason, president. The meeting was attended by every other member of the board, which, besides Mason, is composed of E. Downer, C. C. Olney, Aubrey Wilson and J. P. Strom. Superintendent Helms was also in attendance.

Zoning Ordinance Is to Be Amended By Ciy Council

Richmond city ordinance No. 509 is to be amended by the city council, allowing for the erection and establishment of gasoline stations, electric stations, undertaking parlors, public garages and repair shops for automobiles, anywhere within the city without changing the zoning limits.

An amendment making this change was given its first reading last night and ordered to take its usual course for adoption in 60 days. Under the ordinance applications for permits must be made to the city council and shall describe the property and designate its use; it will then be referred to the city planning commission for a report to the city council.

A public garage is defined in the ordinance as a garage for the storage of two or more automobiles. On receiving an application for a permit the city planning commission must publish it at least one time in the city papers, thus enabling objections to be made, if any.

Auto sales rooms are not included in the ordinance under the heading of public garages, as this was held to be a distinct and separate business enterprise.

DOROTHY'S CASE PUT OFF TO FALL DUE TO ILLNESS

Ellingson Girl to Have Operation For Removal of Appendix This Week

TRIAL IS SET FOR AUGUST 11

Murder Trial Formerly Set For June 15 is Called Off Account Appendicitis

(By Universal Service)

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—Chronic appendicitis, necessitating an operation for the removal of her appendix, has caused the postponement of the trial of Dorothy Ellingson, the San Francisco "jazz girl," who is in the county jail awaiting trial for the murder of her mother on January 15 last. Her trial, which had previously been set for June 15, was postponed yesterday by Superior Judge Harold Louderback until August 11.

She will be taken to St. Francis Hospital either tomorrow or Tuesday, in charge of matrons from the county jail. Her appendix will be removed by Dr. T. D'Arcy Quinn, who is in charge of the medical staff at the county jail.

Arrangements for the operation were made in Judge Louderback's court yesterday. The girl's counsel, Walter McGovern, Alex Mooslin and Sylvester McAtee, made the statement to Judge Louderback that their client was suffering from appendicitis and that an operation would surely be necessary at some time in the future. McGovern said that her complaint might at any time become acute, and that as a result her trial might be interrupted unless an operation should first be performed.

Dorothy, he said, was willing and ready for the operation; the members of her family had given their consent, and an immediate operation had been advised by Dr. Quinn.

Deputy District Attorney Robert Fitzgerald, representing the prosecution, told Judge Louderback that the State would offer no objections to the operation and the postpnement of the trial.

TOO MUCH GOVERNMENT

There is a government sense of uneasiness at the intrusion of federal government in state affairs. Some of the wisest men of country feel that this interference already has been carried too

President Coolidge senses that feeling and shows his understanding in his tax program. Federal taxes are being cut to the t, but state and county expenditures are still mounting. To ck them he wants the governors of the several states to get to- r on their own account and do the job. The other day he had Governors Brewster of Maine, Trinkle of Virginia, and Ex-Governor ardee of Florida, representing the governor's conference to be eld at Poland Springs, Maine, June 18, at dinner. The president utlined to these representatives of the conference plans by which the states can institute reforms in the matter of commonwealth economy. They are all agreeable.

The president believes if there is concerted action by federal nd state government that a considerabl part of the taxes borne by e people can be lifted, and the chief executive has in mind the t that with a lowering of government and state taxes the people the country will have more money to spend for their own needs d pleasures. The silly propaganda that was being sent out, that president was carrying his economy plan to the point he wanted ople to wear hats seven years old and clothes of the period of 90, has, by reason of the good sense of the people and their th in the president, fallen flat, and while there is no doubt that rtain selfish interests may try to revive this asinine propaganda, will be a waste of time, because the American public realizes that e president's policies are sound. The people of this country are ed of being fed cheap buncombe by a class of people whose main re in life appears to be to fatten their own purses.

CONSOLIDATIONS BENEFIT PUBLIC

The Nebraska State Railway Commission, in granting permission to one Nebraska utility company to acquire another, cities benefits arizing from consolidation of competing companies:

1. Reduced cost of production of electricity through eventual consolidation of generating plants.
2. Gradual elimination of duplicate distribution systems and hereby improvement in the appearance of streets and alleys of the city.
3. Gradual elimination of duplicate maintenance cost and elimination of certain duplicate labor costs of production
4. Prevention of unnecessary future duplication of extensions
5. Reduction of overhead costs.
6. Eventual reduction of charge to public.

LAW MAKERS AND LAW BREAKERS

H. M. Atkinson, who is Chairman of the Board of the Georgia Railway and Power Company, declares we have become a nation of law makers and law breakers. He says:

"What we need is fewer laws on the statute books, more respect for law and more regard for justice in the minds and consciences of men.

"I do not mean that we should take less interest in government. On the other hand, we should take a more active interest than ever before. The greatst trouble is that too many of us have pursued the even tenor of our way and left the affairs of state to the politicians and soap box orators. The result has been that the highest offices within the gift of the people have been brought into more or less disrepute and are seldom sought by men of marked ability and high principles

"We have defaulted in our obligations to society and need and aroused public conscience with particular reference to our duty as citizens as it relates to the affairs of state and conduct of our government."

It is rumored that the new synthetic wood alcohol the Germans are importing into America is not poisonous. But we will refuse to take any chances. This may be only bootlegger propaganda.

Speeders who fetch up in police court are luckier than those who go to the hospital.

He's a pretty sorry citizen who can not get credit for more stuff than he can pay for.

After weeding the garden you may get rid of the kink in your back by whitewashing the ceiling.

When appealing to women for votees don't make the mistake of calling them the plain people.

One consolation is that the uplifters will not enjoy heaven very much with nobody to uplift.

The Lavender Shades Are in High Fashion and Are Liked By Youth.

MAUVE, violet, lavender, heliotrope—all colors found in the range of pale purples—are spoken of often in connection with the fashions of the moment. Fuchsia, cyclamen, Bishop's blood and others, covers of a more vivid cast, produced by various blendings of red and purple, like wise hold a strong place in the current fashions. Fashion runs through very interesting phases on this matter of colors. For a while all the reds of a yellow cast were in high vogue. We wore henna, rust, chow, and similar colors called by a dozen different names. Some of these are still worn, but the pendulum is steadily swinging over to the reds with a purplish cast.

For many years lavender was regarded as particularly suitable for the white haired women. Together with gray and white it was looked on as the only really fitting color or an old-fashioned woman to wear. For some reason or other it came to be regarded as fit for half-mourning. These things doubtless did much to rob lavender of its appeal to younger women. Mothers rather hesitated letting their young daughters have frocks of this color. "It seemed so old."

Now this prejudice seems to have been overcome. At any evening assemblage a well dressed woman wearing an old rose or an interesting twinkling of pink seemed to be lavender that is colors count. WISE AND OTHERWISE

IF YOU ARE A FLAPPER

If you rub your hair, don't fluff it up with a comb in public. You know what you would think of a man who combed his hair in the intermissions of a dance or between the acts of a play.

If you dispense with ordinary hose supporters, be sure that the method you have adopted instead is quite satisfactory. A staid profesor testifies to the fact that while the fair maid was loth once to retie a shoe in classroom, she now scratches her stockings under his very nose, but seemingly it bores him more than it shocks.

Remember that the pendulum keeps swinging. If the taste is now for the girl who does not blush, who is frank and unabashed, straightforward to the point of bluntness in her conversation with men, remember that fashions change and that demureness and all the mannerisms of feminine modesty may before long be the fashion. Don't become so bound up in the present flapper manner that you cannot change when it has become passee.

The Bread and Butter Wife

AUTHOR OF "My Husband's Honor," "My Matrimonial Vacation," etc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

SALLY LEE has gone to Atlantic City as public stenographer in a fashionable hotel after quarrelling with TOM PORTER, her fiancé of a year, who resents her work, or even though she does it he and she may live more comfortably.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XL—HIDDEN SECRETS

VIOLET DARE

THE work seemed simple as Miss Barker outlined it to her, and Sally found herself more than [illegible] Miss Barker's [illegible] herself than to papers before them.

She was a tall, [illegible] woman, much older than she looked. Sally [illegible] decided. There was something about her manner and [illegible] seemed [illegible] some times. But the moment Mr. Granville appeared Sally noticed how her manner changed. She laughed a great deal nervously and seemed almost [illegible] and kittenish sometimes.

"Of course, you have to humor Mr. Granville a great deal," the older woman told her. "I guess all men are alike."

She studied Sally carefully as though she had something to say to her, but was [illegible] to [illegible].

"You'll get used to his temper [illegible] one [illegible] it. I handled [illegible] rib. [illegible] for a while [illegible] doesn't seem so cold."

"Oh, I think he has a wonderful disposition, [illegible] so kind and pleasant and thoughtful."

"Yes, he was to me at first." Miss Barker checked herself and chose a safer subject to the ever safe topic of the weather. But a few minutes later she impulsively asked Sally if she wouldn't come to dinner with her that evening.

"We can talk things over better then. Mr. Granville is dining out tonight so he won't expect you to work. Anyway, he told me that for the next few days he wouldn't expect you to do anything but be with me and familiarize yourself with the work. After you get up to New York I'll be too far away to help you. And he'll expect you to know everything."

There was something ominous in the way she spoke, but Sally refused to be downcast. And yet she felt that there were questions the older woman wanted to ask her but hesitated to put into words.

But when Sally came back to dine with her that evening she was greeted affectionately and Miss Barker seemed to feel no restraint in her presence.

"You seem such a child. How can you bear to give up everything and become just an automaton at the call of someone else? I was young, too, when I started—and I had friends then."

She turned away as though to hide her emotion from Sally, but she hardly noticed.

"Oh, but I don't mind working. I like it. And I think it is just wonderful to get a job like this that will take me wherever Mr. Granville goes. I've never been anywhere. You've been to Europe, haven't you."

Miss Barker merely nodded.

"Oh, I think that must be simply marvellous. Think of seeing foreign cities, the cathedrals and art galleries and everything."

"Have you ever gone to see those things alone? I've worked all afternoon and evening with a cross old man who tells the same jokes year after year and expects you to laugh at them. I've eaten all your meals here until you wish that a stranger would come back to you? Oh, it will be all right for you if you just work for awhile. You're young and pretty and perhaps someone will marry you and save you from never having anyone to call your own. Oh, forgive me—I didn't mean to depress you."

Her words questioned her eagerly. Her remarks threw a whole new light on affairs. Was it possible that she had been building another castle of illusion that was bound to fall?

"I've had enough of wandering," Miss Barker told her. "I'm glad to stop. Perhaps you will like it."

She wouldn't tell Sally any more, but she started a depressing train of thought. Sally saw her future in a new light. Miss Barker's interests seemed all wrapped up in other lives than her own. She talked of the time of her sister's children, showed Sally pictures of them.

Salin was aghast at the array of cosmetics.

"This one is named for me," she said, showing Sally a photograph of a chubby little girl. "My sister lets me pick out her clothes, and now that I am going to live in New York all the time I will see her constantly and help her with her lessons and have her near me all the time. It is wonderful to have someone look up to you."

Just a glimpse of the older woman's loneliness, but it told Sally volumes of her starved life.

A little later when she went into her bedroom to put on her hat and coat she glanced at her dressing table. There were photographs everywhere of her sister and her children, but that was not what arrested Sally's attention. It was the bottles and boxes—weapons with which she fought for fleeting youth. Sally was aghast at the array of cosmetics. So that was all Miss Barker had got out of life—a fight for youth, a pathetic effort to get back the years that she felt had been wasted. No people of her own—just her sister's children.

"I—I hope I haven't said anything to make you unhappy," Miss Barker told her as she was leaving. "I spoke impulsively."

"No," Sally told her. "I think you have saved me unhappiness."

for the highest individual sales, Mr. Reed personally bringing in $5280 since Saturday noon.

The other award, that of a fountain pen, was won by E. M. Downer for being the highest salesman on the executive committee. Mr. Downer as president of the Richmond Community Hotel Inc., has been a tireless worker since the inception of the campaign.

STOCK SALES CHEERED.

Two announcements were made which were cheered. It was the case of two out-of-town corporations subscribing for stock in the hotel. The West Coast Theaters who operate the California Theater subscribed for $2200 worth of stock and the Post Honor Grocery Co., subscribed for $550.

Excellent reports were also brought in yesterday by groups 5 and 2, W. W. Scott and J. A. Miller managers respectively.

At the evening's meeting which is to be called promptly at 6:30 the reports will be heard in the usual manner and then a general celebration of the victory will follow. Harry Marcus offered a fountain pen as an award for the man in his division bringing in the most sales this evening and his offer was followed by Division Managers LaMoine, Carter and Ball with similar offers. It was also announced that the executive committee would offer another watch for the salesman with the highest record for the whole campaign. At tonight's meeting the groups that are high for the whole campaign will also be awarded the neat and permanent for permanent possession and it will be announced which groups are to have their pictures taken to hang in the new hotel.

Chairman Jennston is urging all members of the executive committee and all salesmen to be present tonight to celebrate this great community victory.

matter was reported favorable by the building committee and the affair declared closed.

Application of B. H. Shaw for permit to install a gasoline pump on the curb in front of the West Side was reported faverable by the committee and the permit was granted.

A street light at Twentieth and Chanslor avenue was reported favorable by the light committee and was ordered installed.

No protests being recived against the proposed improvement of Thirty-third, Thirty-fifth, Beck, Ohio, Center, Waller and Wall streets, a resolution ordering the work was adopted and bids were called for in two weeks, to be opened Monday night June 22.

The matter of the improvement of Garrard Boulevard, from Ohio to Macdonald avenue, was put over another week to get the approval of the Santa Fe railroad officials on the plans and specifications, when bids at private contract will be let.

Temporary permit of the Key Route Transit company, to operate its ferry bus line in Richmond, was extended for 60 days.

Two Prize Beauties of East Bay Region

(By Arrangement With Oakland Post-Enquirer)

SMOKE CAUSES ALARM

The smoke from a fumigating apparatus in the Schrader Furniture store at Seventh and Macdonald avenue Sunday night, caused a passerby to believe that a fire was burning in the store. He promptly turned in an alarm, but when the firemen arrived they found no blaze. It is reported that the store was being fumigated without notifying the fire department.

"If I Marry Again" At The California

"If I Marry Again" which was screened for the first time last evening at the California theatre deals with an age old question in a new interesting manner. In it is shown the contrast between the successful business man who is a failure in his domestic life and the failure who makes his home life a place of real happiness.

Doris Kenyon is seen in the leading role in "If I Marry Again," and others in the cast include such screen favorites as Lloyd Hughes, Anna Q. Nilsson, Frank Mayo, Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman and Baby Dorothy Brock. John Francis Dillon, whose works in "Flaming Youth" and "Lilies of the Field" carved for him a niche in the directorial hall of fame, directed the picture under Earl Hudson's personal supervision.

Other features on the same program include Will Rogers in his latest cyclone of laughs, "Uncensored Movies;" "Lots of Knots," a Hodge Podge novelty; Larry Canelo at the organ.

"Red Lights" With Raymond Griffith At The Richmond

There are mystery, thrills and suspense in abundance in the new Goldwyn feature photoplay, "Red Lights," which opened a two days' engagement at the Richmond theatre yesterday. It is an adaptation of Edward E. Rose's stage melodrama called "The Rear Car," in which Richard Bennett had such a big success on the Coast and which Taylor Holmes did in the East.

It would be unfair to those who see the picture later to give the plot in detail, but it is a story of a young girl, Ruth Carson, the abducted daughter of a railroad magnate, whose identity is at last discovered. This discovery begins a series of strange and mysterious warnings of imminent death.

Clarence Badger directed the picture and he has kept it a swift, thrilling and baffling tale throughout. There are hair-raising episodes which will "get" the spines of the most blase. The cast is an extremely capable one and includes Marie Prevost and Raymond Griffith in the leads and Johnnie Walker, Alice Lake, Dagmar Godowsky, Jean Hersholt, William Worthington, Frank Elliott, Lionel Belmore and others in lesser roles.

Other features on the same program include "Black Hand Blues," a Spat Family comedy; "Sportlight" a screen sport novelty.

Liver Trouble Causes High Blood Pressure

Medical science knows that poisonous waste in our bodies would actually cause death in a few days if not eliminated by Nature's processes. Because it destroys these deadly poisons, the liver is our most important organ—the body's wonderful purifier.

The liver prevents the formation of body poisons that cause diseases of the heart, kidneys, blood vessels, and are chiefly responsible for premature old age.

When the liver becomes weak, the poisons are sucked up by the blood and health is broken down. Physicians know that the liver cannot be regulated by drugs, but a safe Nature substance has been discovered which will at once increase the vital bile supply. The discovery is purified ox gall.

Get from your druggist a package of Dioxol. Each tablet contains ten drops of purified ox gall. In 24 hours the poison toxins will be removed. Your liver will be regulated. Blood purification will begin. Sallow skin will clear. You will feel so much better you will know you have found the cause of your ill health. Dioxol tablets are harmless, tasteless and cost less than two cents each.

These genuine ox gall tablets are prepared only under the name "Dioxol." If any tablet is offered you under another name, refuse it. Accept only Dioxol in the original, genuine package. Test Dioxol free. Mail this coupon now.

Mrs. Kerry complied meekly, as became the one woman of the family. She had been well-trained by her men-folk.

"Well—where was I?—Oh, yes! I said I'd rather stand. I had my best calling clothes on, you know, Arnie—the foulard. It cost thirty guineas, and I wasn't going to ruin it on that oily seat. . . . Well! she just sat down on the floor and stuck her head into the engine, with all that loose hair about——"

"Loose hair?" Mr. Kerry looked up from his fish.

"Yes. Didn't I tell you? It's all short——"

"Short! You don't mean to tell me Wallis allows his wife to have bobbed hair?"

"You may well stare, Tom! I did myself. It's red, too."

"Good lord!" murmured Arnie, looking as if he were about to be sick.

"I said, 'Why don't you let your chauffeur do these dirty jobs?' And she"—Mrs. Kerry laughed reminiscently — she said, 'Because I know more about it myself.' Just fancy! Thinks she knows more than a man—and about machinery too."

Mr. Kerry laid down his knife and fork, and let out the roar that signified terrific amusement—what his wife called "Tom's real hearty laugh." Arnie, who knew a roar was "not done" nowadays, gave a few neighs and gazed at the ceiling.

"Is she a feminist? How odious!" he drawled, with the little lisp in his s's that was so fascinating. Then he sighed, and resumed his dinner.

"Wallis must be bewitched," remarked Tom, when the roar and its attendant choke had subsided. "I thought he was too sensible to allow himself to be caught by one of those modern young minxes."

Mrs. Kerr replied with the little shrug that says "I don't know."

"She isn't the sort one would have expected him to . . . in fact, she is extremely dull. There's nothing in her. Conversation was quite difficult."

Mr. Kerry guffawed again. "Have they made any alterations in The Towers?"

"My dear, I don't know! She never offered to take me over the house, though I gave her the broadest hints. She's very dense. And I wanted to know what new fittings Henry Wallis put in the bedrooms last year. . . . She even seemed uncertain about the wages her new cook is getting. The housekeeper is staying on and managing everything—and, between you and me—that won't answer! It wouldn't with me." No servant ever did answer with Mrs. Kerry. They left, on an average, once a fortnight. Had they ceased to do so, she would have lost her chief zest, barring her health, in life. As the joint arrived, she remembered her final disillusion. "Her ignorance is extraordinary! She had never even heard of floating kidneys. When I mentioned mine, she went into fits of laughter and said it sounded so funny—'like a goldfish!' . . . I wish I knew what she's giving that cook a year." . . .

But her men folk had become more interested in the results of their own cook's efforts than in a neighboring cook's wages. Mr. Kerry enjoyed his food: on that matter there could be no doubt. He could not only be seen enjoying it, but heard as well. Mrs. Kerry loved to watch this enjoyment. It proved the high-water mark of success had been reached in her ideas of woman's place in the world.

Late in the afternoon of Mrs. Kerry's call at The Towers, Freda met Mrs. Murray in the lane near the church. Being "High Church" (like the Merleys) she was (like the Merleys) not particularly friendly with Susie. But "the practise" had to be considered—especially just now. So she stopped and talked in an offhand way about parochial matters. When nobody more impressive than herself was present, Freda could be very offhand.

Susan had barely been shouted at for five minutes, however, before a two-seater car whisked round the corner. It drew up, and the driver waved wildly.

"Hello, Su! Can I give you a lift anywhere?"

She shook her head. "But I wanted to see you, Leo. Sam wants to know if you will take my Sunday School class . . . just for a few months." . . .

The new bride threw back her head with a shout of laughter. "Oh, my God—no! I haven't the least idea upon such things. . . . Is that Miss Dawes?" She leaned over the car, stretching forth a friendly gauntleted hand. "So sorry I was away when you called. Shall we consider the introductions over—Susie, where are your wits? No; it's too late now—Miss Dawes, I hear you play golf——"

At that moment the awkward thing happened. Freda, rather aghast at what she considered blasphemy, had laid a stiff gloved hand in the gauntlet's warm clasp. She would have preferred merely to bow at this first meeting, but the practise. . . . And at that unfortunate moment Olive and Edward Merley appeared in their car. It was still very uncertain if the Merleys would "take up" with Mrs. Wallis. They were most particular. A girl who said "My God!"—which was a man's remark—would not go down with them at all. And now, in the precarious stage of their acquaintance, Olive and Edward saw Freda apparently on terms of bosom friendship, hand clasped in hand. . . . She hastily drew free; but it was too late. Olive's lips just moved in the slight disfigurement that meant a smile; then her eyes passed, with curiously wooden effect, over Leo. Edward, with apparent difficulty, moved his cap half an inch—and the car shot past.

Leo whistled. "Who are those—Superior Persons?" she asked, instinctively mimicking Olive's smile.

"The Merleys—from Tullingham Hall—friends of mine." An acid tone hid badly Freda's inward rage. At any other time Edward would have stopped.... "I must go. People coming to stay.... Good-by, Mrs. Murray——"

"Oh!" Leo broke in. "But I wanted to ask you about golf."

"I play—a little—with a few friends. My plans are uncertain at the moment.... May go away soon. Good-by, Mrs. Wallis." With a glance whose reproach Leo failed to understand she turned hurriedly away.

Leo glanced at Susan and raised her eyebrows. "Swallowed a poker? Or what's the matter with her? Oh, Susie, who was that delicious canary-bird in the car, beside the girl like a weasel?"

"Leo! They're the people about here—with the exception of Bottreux Castle. Only that's shut up just now."

"The people? Then the people ought to have been drowned years ago! 'Dicky' looked as if he'd lost a worm——"

"Where are you going, Leo?"

"To Cuvingham, to fetch Harry ....And Miss Dawes looked as if she'd lost a worm, too. Perhaps they're each other's worm and have had a row?"

"Leo, how absurd you are! Now, about that Sunday-school——"

Leo opened the throttle, causing a deafening noise. "'I must go, my plans are uncertain,'" she mimicked Freda, "Why am I absurd? Most lives have a secret trouble—so Mrs. Kerry inferred just now. Susie! Have you heard of Mrs. Kerry's tragedy?"

"No. What? Leo, what?" Eyes opened wide in alarm, Susie laid her hand on the car. "Do tell me—what is it? Poor thing!"—with belated recollection of the sympathy expected of a vicar's wife.

Leo pursed her lips mysteriously, flicked off the hand, and slowly started the car. "There is Sam coming; he might hear," she murmured.

Curiosity outdid wifely welcome. Susan half-turned from her husband's approaching figure.

"Yes, yes—Leo, do tell me.... Whisper——"

"Her kidney floats—in aspic!" Leo shouted for the whole village to hear.

"Her kidney floats—in aspic!" Leo shouted for the whole village to hear. Then she vanished in a cloud of dust.

CHAPTER VII

Leo drove on, with a quick smile at the Reverend Sam, whose mouth seemed to have dropped too wide open to be closed again. Since coming to Willerton she had been conscious of a light sense of strain between Susan and herself. The vicar's wife was bound up and swathed around in domestic or parochial cottonwood which was utterly self-absorbent. Naturally she expected to find Leo in the same clogged condition. But Leo married caused her as much perplexity as Leo single. She felt disappointed; Leo felt nauseated.

The "business honeymoon" had proved an unqualified success. Her utter capitulation—that incomprehensible passion for her husband which his own had awakened by its very quietness—though surprising both, had swept them into an enchanted land. They had been too self-engrossed for conscious differences; too infatuated for criticism.

Since their return, business had engrossed Harry, save at week-ends, to the extinction of all else. But he found Leo keenly interested in the novelties or new patents being prepared for the show. With amused pride in the consternation she caused, he took her over the huge works at Cuvingham.

Leo's chief reflection, on the way to the works this evening, concerned a curious little episode that had occurred at breakfast today—an episode to which this unusual jaunt to fetch her husband, owed its origin. The huge library at The Towers was completely empty. The furniture had been chosen, and this morning Harry had announced his intention of ordering "some firm that would know what a library should possess" to stock the room's empty book-shelves.

Leo had thrown him a look of horror. "It sounds like stocking a farmyard! Oh, no!"

"Why not?" he asked; and the very fact of asking such a question gave her a faint—very faint—shock. She hesitated, wondering how to explain what should not need explanation. His next words had strengthened the shock. "A reliable firm would know better than either of us what books a library ought to have."

"But—surely what it ought to have doesn't matter! That would be such a soulless kind of room. Books grow up around one gradually, like friends. They are so human."

"Oh!—oh! Come!" He rose, with the indulgent laugh her ideas often provoked, and brought his cup for more coffee. "This isn't a house for poets and other Johnnies! I haven't time to moon among a few thousand volumes until I have chosen enough."

"I could soon suggest a hundred or two"—she handed him his cup, with a little frown of annoyance—"and surely you have your own old favorites."

"My dear girl, you forget that my life has been full of other matters. Only technical books have been of use to me."

CHAPTER VIII

With the approach of the Motor Show, business—Leo began to hate the word—engrossed Harry yet more. Most of his brief hours at home were spent in his study with a secretary. He became abstracted, when not working; less interested in Leo's doings and less inclined to discuss his own.

Harry swung round from a bundle of late letters. To him that meant serious business.

"Really? I thought he had decided on the Rolls."

"He had. That's why I asked him to dinner to-night." Coming close she took his face between her hands. "Leave those beastly letters and come to bed, darling. You look so fagged. And I want to talk about the play. Wasn't it clever? That speech of——"

His kiss silenced her lips. "Very good," he assented vaguely, his eyes straying to the open letter he held. "I shall come—very soon."

"Do you want children, Harry?" she asked tonelessly, laying down his hand.

"Of course! A son to carry on the business—don't you?"

"Not particularly. Ah!"—as he gave a little start—"don't lose me because of that! Harry—we mustn't let go.... I have never had the craving for—for domestic life—babies—all that, which is supposed to be womanly. Personally, I think, often it's only a pose. My husband—companionship—your love, Harry, is all I want. What does every little convention—the opinions of little people—matter? Love is such a much bigger thing. Isn't it? Don't get discontented——"

"Discontented? Darling! Whatever made you dream of such a thing?" He kissed her again and again, with all his old intensity. "I must have expressed myself clumsily. You—you must make allowances. But—discontented? Never!"

Women's Hose

1—Origin of Hosiery:

The word hose or hosiery is derived from the old German "hosa" meaning breeches; it was used for any covering for the leg, and eventually acquired its modern usage. The earliest hose were cut out of cloth and sewed up in the desired shape. Knitting was the last of the textile processs to be discovered, and it is only about 400 years ago that the art of looping thread together into a fabric was invented, probably in Scotland. The first knitting machine was invented by the Rev. William Lee, of Nottingham, England, in 1589. Although it was a crude affair, it could do the work 500 times faster than the hand process. The English government put excessive duties upon the exportation of stocking machines, but in 1822 one was hidden in salt, and smuggled into Ipswich. This was the beginning of the hosiery industry in America, and Ipswich is the center of the hosiery trade today. American inventors revolutionized machines for knitting hosiery by developing the circular machine and the invention of the "latch" needle. The result has been to cut down the amount of skilled labor required, and also the expense. It is now possible to use five or six different kinds of yarn in a single stocking—the finer qualities where it shows and the heavier where the wear comes.

In a combination slugging and pitching battle going with firey like swiftness through 8 bitter innings, the El Cerrito Merchants triumphed over the Santa Fe aggregation in the Richmond league at First street last night by a 4 to 3 score.

A good many hits were granted, five off Bernadow and 7 off Camp, although the latter was credited with the victory. Errors too were there in habit forming quantities the winners making 7 and the losers 5. Walks did more to deafeat the railroaders than anything else as Bernadow passed four men. He struck out 6 while Camp whiffed 8.

Things looked bad for the winners for a while, as in the first innings three hits a few errors, and some speedy base running gave the Santa Fe a two run lead. They made no more runs until Matthews, the old clouter for his team, slammed a homer over the pasture fence.

TUBERCULOSIS OVERCOME

Oakland, Calif. April 28, 1925.
For about three years I suffered from a bad cough and sore chest. I tried many doctors, all of whom pronounced my case Tuberculosis. My spittle was examined and showed tubercular germs. As I found no improvement from any of the treatments that I took I decided to give the FONG WAN HERBS a test, as a last resort.
After having drunk the herbs for four months, I was a well woman and had gained in weight. A year has elapsed since I began to take the FONG WAN HERBS on April 16, 1924, but today, I am still well and have no sign of my former complaints.

WHY I CAME TO RICHMOND

By ADOLPH WINTERS
Proprietor of the Winters Building Eleventh and Macdonald

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles by prominent Richmond business men giving a brief account of their business careers and reasons why they chose Richmond as the field of their business endeavors.

I came to Richmond from Philadelphia, Penn., seventeen years ago because I believed firmly in the industrial and commercial possibilities of the Pacific Coast in general and of Richmond in particular. My belief in the future of Richmond has been more than justified. I have seen this town grow from a settlement of a few scattered houses to the prosperous and progressive city with building permits averaging more than $100,000 a month.

I began business here in 1911 with a 10x10 florist shop on Macdonald avenue. Later, I moved to 518 Macdonald, taking over the Victrolia agency and the agency for the Baldwin piano. I then moved to the Elks building. Believeing the corner at 11th and Macdonald was destined to become the best business location in the city, I purchased the site and planned for the construction of the building in which I now conduct my business.

It is my firm belief that the man who makes his money in Richmond should invest it in the future of the town to which he owes his prosperity. It is not only sound ethics to do so but it is also good business. It is for this reason that I have devoted most of my surplus to the purchase and development of Richmond property. The future of this city is without limit.

Council Asked

skating until he opened a rink, and no objections are made to theatres, baseball and other amusements. Objection is only made to skating and dancing, two of his business lines, he said.

PATTON MAKES APPEAL.

C. M. Patton, of the West Side Progressive association, said that he stood for the greatest good to the greatest number and was fully convinced that people cannot be legislated into heaven. No sect or church, or set of people, should be allowed to rule the community, he said, and while the few thousand church people might be sincere in wanting such an ordinance, he believed the other 19,000 ought to be considered.

Patten said there are already too few amusements here and if this ordinance is passed it would drive all the youngsters into the neighboring cities on Sunday. "For, if they want to dance or skate they will go where they can get it; they will not go to church," Patten said. He further stated when the young people leave town their parents have no way to keep in touch with them and do not know where they are, while if they can get the amusement at home their parents can be right with them.

Rev. Frank Woten, pastor of the First Christian church, said that he was chairman of the Fellowship committee that suggested the ordinonce and that it was not intended as a personal affront against Mr. Winters. He said the amusements spoken of were not so "innocent" as Mr. Patten might imply, and that the "few" who sponsored the ordinance were probably not so small a number as Patten indicated.

Woten said the ordinance was the result of various complaints that the great noise of the roller skating in Winter's hall on Sunday had interferred with a church service, and similar complaints coming from Stege church in regard to East Shore park dancing. He said there had also been complaints of drinking at Sunday afternoon dances and celebrations that the police were not able to handle.

KEEP THEM AT HOME

Winters, speaking in rebuttal, said it would be better and more moral to have the young people remain at home and enjoy his skating rink and the dancing, under the direct supervision of their parents, than to drive them to Idora park and other places. He said the local police had always furnished ample protection and his entertainments had always been orderly. Winters declared that the people knew when he built his hall what it was for and no objection was made then before he had expended so much money.

Councilwoman Marie Ogborn said that in some respects Mr. Winters was right, and she told of receiving of many reports of young people going to Pinole and other up country points to dances and coming back in a bad and sad condition. There was much need for improvement there, she said.

Councilman Hartnet, said it seemed to him some amusement at home to keep the children in town, where they could be easily handled would be better than driving them away from Richmond, and he moved that the council take the matter under consideration for one week to determine if such an ordinance was really called for. He said 90 per cent of the attendance at county dances is of Richmond people and if they could be kept at home it would be a good thing.

Merchants

than pleased to see the showing made by the reports, and it convinced him, that the merchants of the city, could compete with the merchants of outside cities, not only in goods and prices, but in service as well.

ADDRESS OF EVENING

The address of the evening was made by Kathyrn W. Chace, of the service department of the store of Whitthorne and Swan, in Oakland. The address was a most instructive one to the many present, and showed the great work that is being carried on by the large department stores in seeing that people who are attracted to the stores, receive superior service. Education departments are maintained, and salesmen are taught every angle of their duties, not only so far as the customer is concerned, but they are shown every detail of the wares they have to sell, and the different purposes to which it may be put. Clerks are supplied with such information, that after the stores have attracted people to their places of business through advertising, customers will not be turned away. Among the special features of service, outside of real salesmanship, the speaker mentioned rest rooms, telephone rooms, writing rooms, a personal service shopper, household budget department, classes in millinery, dressmaking and other things, lectures on infants, their proper care, dress and food and a general information bureau.

THOSE WHO "OFFICIATED"

The arrangements for the dinner and program were in charge of the board of directors of the association, assisted by William Mayer, J. H. Fitzpatrick and T. D. Morgan.

The master of ceremonies at the dance following the dinner, was Harry Marcus.

Sidewalks, Drains Ordered Repaired By City Council

Councilman Scott reported to the city council last night that the sidewalks on Macdonald avenue are in very bad condition, in some places so dangerous as to be a menace and the matter was referred to the city engineer to arrange for either the city or the property owners to make repairs.

Scott and Mrs. Ogborn reported open drains in very bad condition on Bissell avenue, and especially at Sixteenth and Bissell, and this matter was referred to the city engineer to have levelled, filled in or graded back so that they would not be so abrupt.

The matter of improving Western Drive, from the highway tunnel to Kozy Kove, was laid over for another week, after it had been reported that several contractors had been interviewed and were not willing to bid on the work. Other contractors will be seen.
